

Bankers go 'eggstra' mile for March of Dimes

GJSentinel.com

By Richie Ann Ashcraft

April 17th, 2009, 2:02 pm

Kristi Adams of American National Bank laughed Friday as an egg was cracked on her head to raise money for the March of Dimes. Photo by Richie Ann Ashcraft

Nine bankers from American National Bank volunteered to be egged Friday afternoon to raise money for the March of Dimes.

They geared up in plastic raincoats and company T-shirts, despite the nippy weather.

Nearly two hundred eggs were purchased for $5 each.

"This is from Joe," the cracker announced as she smashed a gooey egg on the head of Tim Lybarger, regional president.

"Give me more please," Lybarger begged as yolk ran down his face.

The event caused lots of laughter from staff and honking from passing cars at the corner of Patterson Road and 12th Street.

"This is disgusting but fun," said Patricia Worthington.

The eggs were donated by City Market. The bank's business neighbor, Creative Hair Lines, donated a wash and style to participants after the event.

The Walk for Babies March of Dimes event will take place at 8 a.m. April 25 at Lincoln Park.